No matter who you are, you have a body and you can use it to connect, express and create! Facilitators from non-profit Turning the Wheel will be exploring rhythm, song, dance and theater improv, and in class performance with students in Flagship after school programs! They will have fun while learning social emotional life skills like collaboration, leadership, resilience building and spontaneous and creative problem solving. The program begins

Turning the Wheel Missoula operates around a pedagogy of teaching, developed over 20 years of working in the schools, that stems from the knowledge that the body is the primary mechanism for social change, learning and physical and emotional well being. Because play and movement are core components of TTWM's programming, results are swift and lasting and affect the whole person (physical, mental and emotional).

Turning the Wheel Missoula is a non-profit organization dedicated to fostering the social, emotional and physical health for all through movement and creative expression.
